Welcome To Issue #2

We are so proud of the response we received from our 1st issue in February that we decided to continue this thing we call Charity Golf Events Newsletter! We knew that we filled a need for this type of publication when we received KUDOS from experts in this industry for a job well done last month! We vow to continue to work hard to keep your interest, if you are kind enough to share it with colleagues, friends, and most importantly charities who need the help and advice. Our content will improve over time as well as the look to make your reading an enjoyable experience! (Call us about an exclusive page ad!)

SIT BACK & ENJOY OUR MARCH ISSUE!

.....how much to spend, etc., etc.! My confidence stems from the fact I play & manage charity events for a living. With 300+ charity golf committees in my portfolio, I have the experience and proven results to make everything come together very nicely.

TODAY'S TIP: COURSE SELECTION:

Public, Semi-Private, or a Private Golf Course? Let's use some simple MATH logic: You book the golf course type by first factoring in the "cash-capability" of your potential players. If non-corporate you will play a "MUNI", if corporate, you need to step up & play a Semi-P, or Private. Finally, treat the planning like any sales drive or business goal..... & get the Committee Members to buy in and be held accountable. (TRUST IT)

AUCTION CORNER

How to Electrify Your Golf Fundraiser: Make Your Silent Auction Sizzle

(1 of 3 TIPS---To be continued next month!)

Bid sheets be gone. The silent auction, a bastion of tradition at many fundraising silent auctions, has undergone a transformation in recent months.

Who's the instigator of change? Technology.

Electronic gadgets reached their tipping point in 2010 and seemingly appeared out of nowhere to be spotted at many of the trendiest events in major cities. Each vendor has a slightly different system and pricing structure, though they share the same general approach.

Picture a silent auction with no bid sheets. Instead, guests bid using an electronic device. Depending on the vendor, the device resembles a television remote, an iPhone, or a hotel key card. Guests' swipe a card, punch a screen, or text in a number to bid on their desired item. Bids are recorded instantly, digitally.

So what are some advantages of these devices?

1. Ease of bidding

By far, the biggest advantage is how easy it is to bid. At least one system will allow your golfers to bid from anywhere on the course, even though the auction items sit back at the clubhouse. Or imagine your 150 golfers and 50 items squeezed into an ill-shaped space. These devices make it easy to bid without leaving your group conversation. You can stand in the bar line and still actively bid on that trip to Tahoe. Talk about convenience!

....Guests still seem to take an interest in browsing through each item upon arrival, but once they've seen it, they tend to not return. They often place their first bid during their initial walk-around while standing in front of the package.

Thereafter, they bid from wherever they happen to be.

So if your event is widely dispersed or if your silent auction is crowded (lots of people with no room to maneuver), this technology is a definite plus.

It's also helpful for tight timelines. For instance, one of my clients had an exceptionally long program. To allow time for the additional awards during the dinner, the cocktail reception was slashed from 90 to 45 minutes. Had they used the devices, the silent auction could have closed later, during the meal or program. Guests would have had more time to peruse the items online and bid.

CHARITY GOLF EVENTS

Why will golfers play in your golf outing? Is it the Cause, Course or Incentive?

As long as you get a full field, more than likely you don't care and moreover, never even bothered to find out the reason why. You are too busy counting money and thanking heaven that the whole thing is over for another year.

But it really isn't. This day, you have unlimited face to face access of every single "customer" in your field and you need repeat customers. Take advantage of this precious time. Ask questions, shake hands, thank everyone personally and invite them back verbally next year!

Golf outings are like the three corners of a triangle. None are more important than the other, but each are absolutely critical to the structure itself. Your goal is to make sure that your particular "triangle" remains intact and strong. Allow me to explain. Read more at... <http://smtgolfoutings.com/blog-2/>

Five Tips for Successful Event Fundraising in 2011

1. Make it easy! Today's guests and sponsors need immediate access and trouble-free online purchases. Easy to find and easy to use shopping carts with ticket sales are a must. In addition, sponsor packages and journal ad levels should be easy to understand and offer an immediate next step for easy purchase. Traditional printed materials must point users to a web page or website for online purchases for those who prefer that method.

2. Offer More! Today's sponsors (both corporate and individuals) are barraged by solicitations from many sources and, generally, have less to donate. Organizations that offer more recognition and exposure to sponsors have a better chance of securing limited donation dollars versus those who continue to offer the status quo. Online logos, online journal ads and click throughs to company websites expand visibility for sponsors support not only to those interested in the event, but to any and all who find listings on Google and other search engines. Offering corporate supporter the opportunity for good will to the public in support of your mission also opens the door to their spending "marketing" budgets in addition to drawing from shrinking charitable allocations.

On Course Sponsorship Signage Ideas

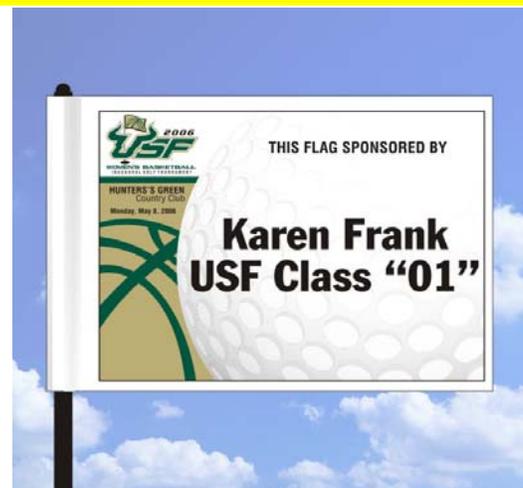

This past year, I was looking for a different take on those boring, yet essential hole sponsorship signs. The sign on the left would be placed at the tee and the sign on the right would be placed 150-200 yards down the middle of the fairway on a par-4 or par-5 hole... In addition to getting a chuckle, every golfer is sure to look at the second sign, even if they didn't see the first. This guarantees the hole sponsor the exposure they desired when they sponsored the hole. It also gives you the opportunity to tell a little about the sponsor in the event that their company name doesn't tell you what they do.

SPONSORSHIP CORNER

HOW TO OFFER YOUR EVENT SPONSORS MORE AND INCREASE YOUR GOLF OUTINGS RETURN ON ENGAGEMENT

As event planners get ready for a year that offers a ray of hope to generate more revenue from their golf outings, an opportunity exists to take your event to the next level. The way to do that is, to do in real-time what use to take a long time. Today's High Tech / High Touch consumer has a high comfort level of things digital and video. Long gone are the days when you mailed brochures with a Tear Off Form to be completed and returned by mail with a check or credit card info and then logged in manually and then sent a confirmation and receipt back to the golfer(s). This process that use to take weeks, now is done in minutes.

Golf outings are supported by a demographic group that represents "heavy users" of computers and Smartphones. This season, those who pay $250 and up to play in a charity golf outing, expect to have the option to register and pay electronically for themselves and their guest(s).
